'Phone Marriage'

Another marriage by proxy is performed by Municipal Court Judge Nathan R. Margold in Washington, D. C., as Marine Sgt. Helen Hill prepares to say her "I will" into the phone. Bridegroom at the "wedding" was First Sgt. Jack Barnett Bowman, 23, Army Air Forces, who answered from Hawaii.

Washington Roundup

In Washington today is disclosed that the War department and the office of strategic services have clamped the lid down on an official report which, it revealed, would reflect credit on the cause of General Mihailovich, minister of war of Yugoslavia. The report was prepared by two United States officers who were with Mihailovich's forces. Suppression of it clearly indicates the United States has committed itself to building up the rival leader, Marshal Tito, head of the Yugoslav Partisans.

On Capitol Hill House Majority Leader McCormack warns failure to clear up the legislative log-jam now facing Congress will probably mean an interim session between the two national political conventions. Congress has set June 20 as its goal for recessing but only two of its 15 major appropriation bills have been enacted this far.

In the Senate today the chamber is expected to uphold its historic rule of unlimited debate by defeating a motion to close arguments on the House-approved anti-poll tax bill. Failure of the closure motion may result in the bill being dropped for this session.

Sen. Wheeler (D) Mont., meanwhile says he will drive for passage of his bill to prohibit drafting of fathers over 30 despite the new selective service orders which grant all men of this age group an indefinite stay. Sen. Reynolds (D) N. C., chairman of the Senate military affairs committee, expresses belief, however that drives for both deferment of fathers and for national service will now be halted.

In the House, Rep. Harness (R) N. D. says results of a private poll of American labor prove conclusively that industrial workers oppose and will resist "the socialist trend toward government operation of business."

PA NEWC Observes

At one of the swimming holes around the city, bathers were noted on Sunday enjoying an early season swim. Water was not so cold, the lads reported.

Dogwood blossoms are at their height at the present time in the woods of Lawrence county, Pa. Newc is informed.

Camp Reynolds soldiers today donned their summer uniforms but until the end of the month they will be permitted to wear their olive drab uniforms after duty hours.

Orchard operators in the county are quite enthused about the prospects for a good fruit yield during

U. S. Fortresses And Liberator Bombers Push Offensive Against Europe

HUGE FORMATIONS CROSS TO FRANCE

By JOHN E. LEE
(U. S. Staff Correspondent)

LONDON, May 15.—United States fortress and Liberator bombers pressed the Allied air offensive into the 31st consecutive day today with attacks on military installations in northern France after British Mosquito bombers blasted Cologne and objectives in France and the low countries by night.

The big bombers again raked the Pas De Calais invasion coast area. Mustangs provided the escort. No enemy aircraft were encountered but considerable anti-aircraft fire was experienced. All of the bombers returned safely. One fighter is missing.

Marauder and Havoc bombers of the ninth air force attacked a railway yard in northern France and a German airfield at Creil, 25 miles north of Paris. They were escorted by fighters.

RAF craft also mined enemy waters while German aircraft carried out what was believed to have been anti-invasion spy raids over England.

All of the British night bombers returned to their bases.

Mustang fighters accompanied the heavy American daylight bombers in the early morning operation.

Moscow Radio Urges Revolt Of Axis Satellites

LONDON, May 15.—(INS)—The Moscow radio, advising Europe that "titanic battles for approaching" called directly upon the peoples in Axis satellite countries today to revolt against Germany.

The Vichy government, meantime was advising the French that "the last breathing space has arrived." While the Germans were seizing all automobiles in southern France and systematically organizing reception centers to protect German civil residents in France, Philippe Henriot, Vichy propaganda minister broadcast this pessimistic message to the French population:

"We cannot give you any last minute instructions on how to behave or where to seek shelter when the allies land in France as we do not know where the main allied blow will fall."

Partisans Retake Starigrad Harbor

LONDON, May 15.—(INS)—Recapture of important Starigrad Harbor, 25 miles south of Split, by Marshal Josip (Tito) Broz's Yugoslav partisan forces was reported today.

The announcement was contained in a broadcast of a communiqué which warned that the "final blow against the invaders" is near.

Another partisan force seized the town of Zhitice, in eastern Bosnia, and beat off a strong German attack on the Skradin railway line in Dalmatia.

Starigrad is situated on the island of Hvar which the partisans took with the aid of Allied forces at the end of March. The Germans had succeeded, however, in retaking the port.

Attacks In Italy Start Of Offensive

By MAJOR PAUL C. RABORG
(Written Especially for N. S.)

NEW YORK, May 15.—The new offensive on the Italian peninsula is making slow, steady progress along the entire front. The allies are fighting in San Angelo, Santa Maria and Infante have been captured. The assaulting troops are only representative of the United Nations. The Americans, British dominions, Indians, Poles men of the British Isles and Frenchmen are driving against Hitler's Gustav line, constructed in the mountains on the Italian peninsula.

First Blow Of Offensive

Already many Americans, because of our customary impatience, are asking why the progress is so slow. To them there should be only one answer. If Americans knew the plans of the assault by the United Nations against fortress Europe, Hitler would know them too. Were that the case, the approaching offensives

U. S. Infantry Captures Town

Santa Marie Infante Taken In Stiff Battle On Italian Front

By LARRY NEWMAN
(U. S. Staff Correspondent)

WITH THE FIFTH ARMY, in Santa Maria Infante, Italy, May 15.—After 72 hours of intense fighting, much of it hand to hand, American infantry has taken what was once the town of Santa Maria Infante.

American artillery almost flattened the town during the three-day struggle.

German and American dead lie sprawling where they fell and wrecked equipment litters the area.

Tanks Wrecked Near Together

An idea of the closeness of the struggle could be had just south of the town where a German Mark IV tank and an American tank lie wrecked within 20 yards of one another. They apparently smashed headon during the course of battle.

Wearied American infantrymen, who jumped off on the attack at 11 p. m. Thursday and fought without rest, often cut off from their units, dug hasty foxholes in the town as protection against German heavy artillery and mortar fire.

Correspondents entered the town with Capt. Gilmer Heitman, a hotel operator of Fort Meyers, Fla.

He personally stormed a heavy German pillbox and killed three Germans with shot through the head from 500 feet range. Forced to

Germans Admit Some Retirement In Cassino Area

LONDON, May 15.—(INS)—The German high command admitted today that Nazi troops had "retreated a few kilometers south of Cassino" on the Italian battle front.

"After bitter fighting, during which the enemy lost 50 tanks south of Cassino alone," said the Nazi announcement, "our troops in the southernmost sector of the front retired a few kilometers toward the west to a prepared position."

"Italian MTBS (motor torped) boats sank an enemy corvette off Anzio. West of Lghorn an enemy MTB was sunk and another badly damaged by gunfire from a German steamer."

Secret Of D-Day Being Well Kept In Allied Ranks

Complete Isolation Ring Around Britain Keeps Information From Escaping

INITIAL MASTERY OF SKIES SEIZED

By PIERRE J. HUSS
(U. S. Staff Correspondent)

SUPREME ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, England, May 15.—Fantastic fortunes beckon both sides of the channel to anyone able to conjure into the crystal ball a visual picture of "D"-Day in its initial invasion stages.

This correspondent can guarantee that Adolf Hitler's price has no limit for the magician or astrologist who can lay bare the Allied secret in a convincing way. Up to now, barring all slippings, General Dwight D. Eisenhower has set not only initial mastery of the skies from the Luftwaffe but has won the battle for secrecy.

On our side of the channel, there'd be no lack of gold flowing into the coffers of the magician able to depict the second front in the crystal ball, if only to satisfy the rabid curiosity of millions.

State Of Expectancy

On the eve of this "battle of the centuries," it has transformed the minds of men completely from the normal war-weary lassitude into an abnormal mental state of expectancy mixed with nail-biting anxiety and nerve-wracking impatience.

The very air breathes "invasion" and into the faces of civilian and soldier alike has crept a perceptible "hush hush" glance and brevity of discussion on matters pertaining to the military. The barber says it's a "nice day" and means that today could be "D"-Day.

The complete isolation ring drawn by Eisenhower around Britain.

Mrs. Weatherill's body was found by her husband, Nyl, 28, a railroad welder, and his brother, James, following an eight hour search.

Pottawatomie County Coroner L. H. Tyler said examination of the body showed the chain of a locket about her neck had been twisted into her throat. Her clothing was badly torn and injuries on her forehead indicated she had struggled fiercely before being overpowered.

Weatherill told police his wife left a dance late Saturday night to return to her home where her two children, ages 6 and 3, were with a neighbor. She was not seen alive again.

Arthur Mometer

I took a trip through a gallery where pictures were hung on the wall, but the gallery was the great outdoors and the walls were not there at all. The canvases were strung about in a riot of color and form, no geometric rules were there, it looked like a heavy storm had covered the trees with a blanket of snow, in those limitless outdoor rooms, for the dogwood is out and accompanying them a million of Juneberry blossoms. And these are the canvases I enjoy, with their natural color and line, a treat to the eye and peace to the soul, the weather is eighty-nine.

New Landing By Allies Is Feared

Axis Forces Watching Coast Of Italy For Possible New Moves

LONDON, May 15.—(INS)—Fears of another Allied landing somewhere in Italy and a possible invasion of the Dalmatian coast of Yugoslavia were voiced today by the Germans.

An indication that the Germans expected landings in Yugoslavia was given in a German radio announcement which said a close watch was being kept along the coast both day and night.

A German war correspondent was reported to have declared that the Nazis had tightened their guard to forestall landings in Dalmatia.

Walter Seydlitz, Rome correspondent of the Transocean agency, said an official warning that a new landing in Italy is imminent and that Rome may therefore be cut off had been issued by Italian authorities.

"Sunday papers," said Seydlitz, "unanimously described the Allied offensive between the Gulf of Gaeta and Cassino as so far the most determined attempt to battle their way through to Rome."

The book which is the earliest known to have had illustrations is the set of Egyptian papyrus rolls called the "Books of the Dead," which was written 15 centuries before Christ.

A tired, 26-year-old infantryman, Pvt. Frank Cimini, North Hampton, Mass., told of hiding in a foxhole in the German lines for nearly 60 hours.

Most of Cimini's company had been killed, wounded or captured when the Germans sent out three men, presumably surrendering, when the Americans went out to get them, some 40 Germans attacked them from the rear.

Cimini hid in a little cave under the road, and although the Germans pulled a man out a hole five feet from him, they missed him.

Three other men, now in the hospital, also missed detection. For nearly three days the quartet underwent a hellfire of bombing and shelling by both sides.

Finally, without food, water or ammunition, they made a shell-peddled race into a nearby house where they were rescued when our troops finally broke the German lines.

Bottleneck Breakers

By pressing metal powders into the desired shape in one stroke, it has been possible for Chrysler Corporation to produce many parts for weapons in but a fraction of the time required to make them by ordinary machine methods. This process also eliminates waste of precious materials and saves countless man-hours.

It all started some years before the war when Chrysler Corporation's Amplex Division began pressing bearings out of powdered metal and impregnating them with oil which penetrated the tiny pores of the metal itself. Once installed in hard-to-reach places in automobiles, vacuum cleaners, washing machines and other devices, these "Oilite" bearings provided their own lubrication without further attention.

Today almost every American-built weapon is made in larger quantity, at a saving of time and material, and functions better in action because it contains from one to scores of precision parts made by Powder Metallurgy.

Such parts range from single pieces weighing 64 pounds down to tiny rivets weighing 10,000 to a pound.

Thus the science of peace has been applied to conserving the nation's manpower, materials and finances while speeding the production of better weapons.

Toward Final, Smashing Victory

Through the powerful new offensive in Italy and the virtual ultimatum to the Axis satellites to get out of the war "now," the Allies have taken important steps toward the final, crushing knockout of Germany.

That both moves—the one on the southern war front and the other on the political front—are important preliminaries to invasion from the west can not be questioned.

Along with the continued stupendous bombing attacks on Hitler's railroads and factories they indicate a speed-up in the approach to a climax of the war.

By serving peremptory notice on Hungary, Romania, Bulgaria and Finland, the Allies are not only giving the satellites one more chance to cut loose from their Nazi slave-drivers, but are applying another stinging goad in the war of nerves against Germany.

The implication of the strong Allied statement is that if the four Axis helpers do not make the break with Nazism, however hard it may be to do that, they must bear the heavy part of the drastic terms to be imposed upon a totally defeated Germany.

Furthermore, through this warning the United States is telling Finland with unmistakable bluntness that it can tolerate no more stalling by the Helsinki government. Heretofore we have been moderate toward the Finns, with whom we are not formally at war. Russia, in turn, is putting similar pressure on Bulgaria, which is not its declared enemy and the bulk of whose people want to be on Moscow's side.

In the vigorous resumption of the Italian offensive General Alexander, Allied commander, and General Clark, of the Fifth Army, leaves no doubt that their major purpose is the destruction of German forces.

If one objective is the freeing of Rome from the barbarians, this newspaper urges—as it has urged before—that a plan of campaign be adopted which will spare the historic capital from direct attack, says the Inquirer of Philadelphia.

But it would be well for us at home to restrain our eagerness for such a hoped-for event as the deliverance of Rome. Against the onslaughts of the Americans, British, French, Canadians, Indians, New Zealanders, Italians and Poles the enemy may be expected to defend with desperate ferocity, every hill and valley between Cassino and Rome.

It is heartening to know that strong air support is being given the Fifth and Eighth armies as they push forward. But if it develops that the one chief aim of this drive is, as the Allied commanders suggest, to keep the German forces engaged and to destroy them, this gain will be achieved. Twenty or more enemy divisions will be prevented from being transferred to the invasion front.

As events move inexorably toward invasion and crisis, every blow delivered by the Allies now must be full-powered, in the stern determination for final victory at the earliest possible moment.

Good Reason For Jap Jitters

With Admirals King, Nimitz and Halsey recently reported conferring on war strategy, it is not unlikely that before long the Tokyo radio will not have to speculate, as it has been doing, on the "lack of major developments in the Pacific during the last few months."

The Japs, like the Nazis, seem to be having an attack of war nerves and to feel a little uncertain about the Allies' plans. Apparently fishing for information, they are predicting an offensive from the Aleutians and are attempting to swing away the American naval blows at the Carolines and the Marianas as trivial.

Keeping the Japs guessing does no harm. What has already been accomplished in the Pacific leaves no doubt that when the right time comes American sea-air might, along with American and Australian land forces, will put a drastic end to Japanese pre-crisis jitters.

Belgium Continues To Fight

"Of these the bravest are the Belgians." Thus, Caesar, 2,000 years ago, describing his Gallic opponents, summed up the inhabitants of Flanders. In the last war the soldiers of King Albert worthily carried on the tradition.

Now Belgium is conquered, but still fights. "News from Belgium," a publication which tells of the struggle, reports the following acts of sabotage from the one province of Hainaut in a single month. Over 30 pylons supporting electric high tension cables were blown up. Several electric sub-stations and a railway signal box were destroyed. Railroad tracks were damaged at 29 points. About 600 pounds of dynamite were stolen at the Mons railroad depot. A number of lock gates were damaged by explosives. In most of the mines of Hainaut, production during the month was cut in half.

Remember that detection for any of these acts means death, and that tale-bearing is liberally rewarded. The Belgians, though disarmed, are still fighting for freedom, and the time is not far off when they will attain it.

Educating The Enemy

It has been said that a true peace never will be possible until those countries now opposed to the United Nations can be educated to the democratic way of life and away from the old ideologies which periodically cause the world to break out in flames.

Much discussion has been held on this subject without much progress. Now comes a new problem, that which develops from an announcement by the U. S. Army that a total of 183,618 Axis soldiers are prisoners of war in various camps of the United States. Of this number, 133,135 are Germans, 50,136 Italians and 347 Japanese.

The War department, in revealing the figures, emphasizes that many of the prisoners now are being acquainted with the American way with work in American communities to help combat the labor shortage. Their observations, plus their absorptions as they read American newspapers and magazines are expected to help make good human beings out of bad Nazis or Japs.

This may work out to a certain extent. But it will be no easy task to complete the mass mental transformation of 183,618 men and immediately convert them to our way of life.

Nevertheless, the Army's move is in the right direction. We cannot, after the war, suddenly free and place into general circulation many thousands of minds which retain the conviction that they are members of a super-race, born to rule and instilled with a cruelty more vicious than that of pre-civilized barbarism.

The prisoners are those who by the fortune of war, will have missed the crushing personal experience of defeat on the ramparts of their homelands. Their education must take place here and through methods such as the War department has commenced to employ. By example, they must be taught, if possible, the error of the Axis ideology and the futility of cruel and haughty ambition in a world that contains nations as potent, free and decent as our own.

Oil Dispute Silence

WASHINGTON, May 15.—A great many people are keeping very quiet just now about the Arabian pipeline project that stirred such an uproar a few weeks ago. When it next comes to public light, it is likely to have a more innocuous look.

Behind the scenes, the state department is busily engaged in trimming the project down to a scale that might have some chance of approval by congress and the public. Government ownership of the proposed $150,000,000 pipeline across Saudi Arabia now appears to be definitely out.

The government may lend the money to the Arabian American Oil Company to build a smaller pipeline than the one originally projected. But it was felt on mature consideration that to put the United States directly into the oil picture in the Middle East would be to court all kinds of diplomatic and political dangers.

See Clash Likely

Russian and British interests are likely to clash in that area after the war. Already there is strong rivalry between the two in northern Persia.

If our government had a direct stake of $150,000,000 in that area, there would be a much bigger chance of our being drawn in. Even with a private interest of such magnitude as the oil wealth of Saudi Arabia, the tendency toward involvement will be strong.

Remember, too, that any clash in the Middle East would take place against the backdrop of India and the seething unrest of the Myriad peoples on the vast subcontinent. It's possible to see, across the year, how we might become part of an effort to sustain by force of arms the status quo in that part of the world where so much yeast is working.

When our technical experts sat down with British experts, they found that Britain had no objection to our building a pipeline in what has been in a sense a British "sphere of influence." They would raise no objection even though oil from the Arabian line would compete with British-owned oil in Iran.

Much Nonsense

A great deal of nonsense has been written about oil, and I must confess that occasionally I've contributed to it. In the truth between the two wars it was an obsession—to get oil reserves, to hold them. The most devious diplomatic jockeying went on around this burning ambition.

But what has Germany proved since September of 1939? That a great power can wage a major war without important oil resources. Ever since 1939 the "experts" have been writing that the Nazis would finally and absolutely collapse on X date because on that date they would have no more oil.

Yet the Nazis have fought on for a whole succession of X dates. And they're still fighting. Apparently it's been done on synthetic gasoline, plus what was stored, plus the comparatively small supply from the Romanian oil fields.

German technicians have done a super-duper job. But I refuse to believe that our own engineers and chemists could not do the same thing if necessity forced it.

Not As Hard To Solve

Actually, this question of oil may not be as hard to solve as some people have feared. The extent of agreement that came out of the recent conference of British and American experts was an agreeable surprise to all concerned.

The British showed every desire to cooperate. They went so far as to say that they would open up for agreement which discriminated against American oil companies in the world market. The war is open now for a meeting—expected in ten days or two weeks—of top officials from both governments, and then finally will come an international conference.

This is one symptom of the improved atmosphere between the United States and Britain. Lord Halifax said in a speech to the institute of women's professional relations the other day:

"Just as it takes two to make a quarrel, so does it take two to make an agreement."

We're learning that. Sometimes the lesson is painful. Waging peace, as Governor Dewey said in his speech to the public, is going to take the same intensive effort as waging war. If the problem of world oil comes near to an equitable decision, then there's hope in other directions.

Ghost Writing

WASHINGTON, May 15. IN HIS book, "The Ghost Talks," Mr. Charles Michelson, who for nearly fifteen years was publicity director of the Democratic National Committee, opens up again the question of who writes the President's speeches and messages. This is not, to be sure, a very important question, but it is interesting.

THE important things, of course, are what is in these speeches and messages, and do they reflect Mr. Roosevelt's ideas. As to the latter there has never been any real question. They do. As to the contents, there is equally no question as to the quality of the writing. The choice of words and the forcefulness of the presentation. In the past twelve years, Mr. Roosevelt has made exceedingly few poor speeches. Even those who disagree with his policies admit they have been presented well.

BUT, Mr. Raymond Moley, for a number of years closer to Mr. Roosevelt than any other, and the late Gen. Hugh Johnson, who for a long time was his chief aide and intimate friend, have recorded that various persons, including themselves—did the writing. Among others to whom has been ascribed the authorship has been ascribed are Mr. "Tommy" Corcoran, Ben Cohen, Rexford G. Tugwell, the late Louis Howe, Mr. Robert Sherwood and Mr. Archibald MacLeish. And in this ghost writer list, too, belong former Judge Sam Rosenbaum, who is looked upon as the current message writer. It was he, for example, to whom was attributed the tax veto message which caused Senator Alben Barkley's sensational revolt.

FROM Mr. Moley and General Johnson the very clear impression is gained that the only part of his speeches which the President wrote himself was the peroration. He always, said Mr. Moley, liked to write that himself, with a lead pencil. The rest was all written for him. There is nothing to criticize about that. So long as the ideas are his own, it is perfectly sensible enough for the President to save himself labor by employing gifted writers to do the work. Of course, there have been some Presidents who never let anyone write anything for them, but there have been plenty of others who took the line which Mr. Moley and General Johnson say Mr. Roosevelt took.

HOWEVER, Mr. Michelson disavows from this. His contention is that no one writes the Roosevelt speeches; that Mr. Roosevelt is a much better phrase maker than any of his aides; that it is his custom after his aides have put their views on paper to read them carefully, then he down on a sofa, put his hands behind his head and dictate the final speech. This is in complete contrast to the Moley-Johnson statements on the subject—and to the general belief. There are several reasons for thinking the Moley-Johnson view sounder than that of Mr. Michelson. One is that in their day, both Mr. Moley and General Johnson had far closer personal relations with the President than Mr. Michelson ever achieved. They had his complete confidence and were aides in a sense Mr. Michelson never was.

ANOTHER reason is that Mr. Michelson never got in a position where he could take a detached view of Mr. Roosevelt—and, if one judges from his book—is not in such position now. Certainly throughout his adulation of Mr. Roosevelt and his general attitude toward him is that of an old family retainer rather than of an independent outsider. Also, there are the various inaccuracies scattered through the book, such, for example, as twice placing the Dayton evolution trial, at which he was present in Kentucky instead of Tennessee. And, of course, there are some who might consider as an additional reason for not accepting the Michelson view his gleeful account of his career as a faker on the Hearst newspapers. Even as Mr. Michelson tells the story forty years afterward, it is not one greatly to enhance confidence in his narrative. However, aside from these things, it is an interesting well written and not without humor, though it makes no contribution to political history.

IT IS somewhat surprising that a man who for 15 years has been in position to know what went on behind the scenes in politics apparently knew so little. Perhaps it is because there wasn't a great deal to know. The "secrets" of politics are always exaggerated, as is the subtlety of politicians. Mr. Michelson may have not had any "secrets" to reveal or he may have been too cautious to do so, revealing. At any rate, no one would call his a very outspoken book. It is a little strange that he is not more appreciative of Mr. Raskob and Mr. Shouse, as they are the men who really rescued him from the New York World and put him in position to make his reputation. And perhaps it was to be expected that in defending himself from the charge of conducting a systematic "sneak campaign" against Mr. Hoover after his election to the Presidency, Mr. Michelson should indulge in a lot of little sneers and jeers at Mr. Hoover, well calculated to sustain the charge. They do not improve the book. Nor add to his own stature.

Invasion Losses Are Hard To Predict
Sicilian Casualties Not A Criterion
Small Firms Sidestepped On Contracts

By HELEN ESSARY
(Central Press Columnist)

WASHINGTON, May 15.—All predictions about Allied losses in the invasion of the European continent should be taken with a grain of salt. Some so-called experts have earned some money by predicting that 30 per cent casualties in the initial landing forces. Others say the losses will be light.

The truth is that even the highest-ranking American and British leaders have no way of estimating losses with any accuracy. The best they can do is plan for the worst and have enough reserves to fill all gaps.

When Allied forces invaded Sicily heavy losses were expected, and reserves were standing by to replace casualties. Actually, our losses in that operation were very light, much less than expected by United States and British leaders.

One thing is certain: The Allied forces will have plenty of air cover when they move against the continent. That should help cut losses greatly.

This does not mean that the Allies can land without suffering comparatively heavy casualties, but it is pure guesswork to warn that 30 per cent or more of the initial force will be killed or wounded. There can be no answer to that question—and none should be asked—until actual counts are made after the beachhead is established.

Pressure Brought Freeze

War Production Board Chairman Donald M. Nelson is convinced that issuance of the "freeze" on civilian production in tight labor areas during his absence recently in Florida for a brief rest came as result of intense pressure by the military.

The Army has been fearful that WPB would let the war down too soon, despite established policy to the contrary, and sought to erect an iron-clad barrier against any appreciable revival of civilian output until success of the European invasion is established.

Issuance of the ill-conceived "freeze," however, brought the wrath of Congress down upon Nelson's head. It was too inflexible and would vitally have forestalled any boost in civilian production, even where it would not interfere with the war effort. Idle facilities and manpower were in prospect.

Nelson sees eye-to-eye with the military on the need for keeping war production at a high pitch, and agrees that civilian production must be self-pedaled until the invasion is decided. However, he will seek to accomplish the same end by more palatable directives.

Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, national draft director, is one of the important Washington officials who insist on writing their own speeches instead of "ghost" writers.

Hershey's position is that what he says in official statements affects the lives of so many men and their families that he must get his ideas stated exactly as he wants them. His assistants say he has found no one who can do the writing job to his satisfaction, and, anyway, the general does a highly creditable piece of writing himself.

Hershey Too Careless

That Hershey must be careful in his statements is unquestioned. In fact, that members of local draft boards read accounts of his speeches—and have a habit of interpreting them into effect without awaiting further directions from Washington.

In the writer of plans for post-war reconversion, the little business man is coming in for his share of attention and according to present plans, will be in the front row when the signal is given for the "big push" to civilian production.

A definite movement is under way in the Senate to divorce the smaller War Plants corporation from its parent body, the War Production Administration.

Several senators who plan to sponsor such action contend that WPB is prejudiced against allocating sufficient war contracts to small business in production essential to the war effort. Moreover, they maintain that WPB is also lax in according favored treatment to small firms in industries now being converted to partial civilian production.

They are adamant in holding that small business should be given preferential treatment because of the lack of large resources and their limited capital. Big business, they say, can hold its own, and they cite figures showing that 70 per cent of war production is controlled by approximately 100 large firms.

The World and the Mud Puddles

SOME BRITISH WORRY

British war leaders who are reported to have expressed concern over the American political scene are worrying needlessly and perhaps in ignorance of the character of the American people.

The possibility that Thomas E. Dewey might be elected president is reported troubling the British who fear that this would mean the institution of some new policy. Some of the spokesmen for our British allies profess to feel that such a change might involve the establishment of what they term a new foreign policy.

What foreign policy? If we have one now that is understandable to the British, they would be doing us a good turn by letting us in on the secret. They might also explain some of the criticisms they are receiving at home over what passes for the British foreign policy. And (Continued On Page Seven)

LOOKING AT LIFE

By ERICH BRANDEIS

A very important looking gentleman the even wore a derby hat sat in the train seat next to me this morning.

I noticed him reading the Page One news and the editorials and the political column.

Then I saw him take out a gold pencil and make a note on top of the front page.

Probably something about an important conference he had to attend, I thought, or an idea for a brief he had to write.

As the train was jostling along my seat-companion dozed off and his paper was lying in his lap.

And there was the notation he had made: "Don't forget the cheese."

There was this so important looking man with so many responsibilities, so much work to be done during the day, this man with the derby and the stiff collar and the gold-rimmed eyeglasses and the disfigured frown—"Don't forget the cheese."

I can just about imagine the scene.

He was getting dressed, and from the other bed came a querulous voice:

"Now listen, Henry, you know I can't get the Cheddar cheese out here. You'll have to get it in the city."

"But dear, I'm so awfully busy," "There you go again, Henry. Here I slave all day to make a home for you and to entertain your friends, and you can't even do a little thing like getting some cheese. That's all the thanks I get."

"All right, all right, I'll get the cheese," I can hear him say, and that Cheddar cheese will probably be the uppermost thing in this mind all day.

Sometimes I wonder whether these terribly important business problems really are any more important than those things on which our wives spend so much time and so much thought and which we are so apt to belittle.

I know that I isn't very vital whether my eggs are boiled a little too long or not quite long enough.

Plan Series Of Meetings In County
On Problem Of Artificial Breeding

Dairymen from 15 counties in western Pennsylvania, which included a delegation from Lawrence county, met in Butler Friday to discuss the possible organization of a central artificial breeding unit to serve western Pennsylvania dairymen.

A survey will be made in each county, following which another meeting will be held on June 30 to discuss further the plans for organizing such a central unit.

A committee serving with L. C. Dayton, county agent, will conduct a series of meetings throughout the county to determine the sentiment of local dairymen.

Those who attended the meeting, in addition to Mr. Dayton, were Joe Ferris, New Wilmington; J. H. Wilson, Wampum; John Hove and Albert McConnell, North Beaver; Ray Marshall, Perry township; and Harold Green, of Neshaunock township.

R. H. Umstead, dairy specialist, of Penn State college, told those in attendance that there are now four active associations in Pennsylvania.

Local Young Ladies Chorus Presents Deshon Program

Taking the word of many of the men quartered in the Deshon General Hospital, the concert of the New Castle Young Ladies' chorus Sunday evening in the hospital was one of the best things they have had for some time. Not only did the chorus sing in the hospital auditorium, but four more abridged concerts were presented in the halls of the wards upstairs.

The chorus numbers 40 young ladies, directed by William Richards with Miss Betty Fowler as the choral accompanist and Mrs. Dorothy Patch Perdue as vocal accompanist. An orchestra directed by Vic Cassella provided "sweet and hot" music that the crowd liked. Jack Kegg was heard in a comedy number.

Two groups of chorus numbers were presented with the following young ladies appearing in solos: Mary Solomon and Ann Mann; Aileen Cummings took the vocal in the chorus number, "McNamara's Band." The Grizzly Sisters pleased the crowd with duet numbers. For a novelty six of the patients were brought to the stage and competed in a "tongue twister" contest, each of them getting a carton of cigarettes as a prize. Two of the boys were from Lawrence county, Alfonso Frankovich from Charles street and Lee Sector of Harlanburg, Baltimore Pike county, Ky., and the state of California.

The program was sponsored by the CIO, which provided the transportation for the entertainers and the cigarettes for the tongue twister contest. Miss Claribel Cope opened the show with an announcement of the chorus and its sponsor.

James Hargreaves was the inventor of the carding machine and the spinning jenny.

And Labor Assembly Hall
Saturday Evening

Employees of The News honored Harold L. Sewall, of Laurel avenue, who has been accepted for service in the U. S. Navy, and will leave shortly for induction, when they gathered for a farewell party in the Trades and Labor Assembly hall on East Washington street, Saturday evening.

The evening was spent informally, and in behalf of his fellow-workers, Sewall was presented with a purse, the presentation being made by Charles E. Allen. Lunch was served at the close of the evening's program.

The committee in charge of the arrangements was composed of Harry Carlson, C. Arthur Patterson and J. Clyde Burkholder.

Nazis Massing In Northwestern Bosnia Is Report

By JOHN TALBOT

Representing the Combined Allied Press.
AT MARSHAL TITO'S HEADQUARTERS IN YUGOSLAVIA, May 9.—(Delayed)—German troops are massing in northwestern Bosnia, according to the latest reports received here. There are now thousands of German and Quisling soldiers in the occupied towns of Bihac, Bosanski Krupa and Bosanski Novi.

These towns are all on the northern fringe of the wild mountainous country which stretches into western Bosnia, one of Marshal Tito's major strongholds in liberated Yugoslavia.

The Germans may be preparing for either of two operations: firstly, they may be concentrating their forces for a concerted drive through Bosnia to dislodge the partisan army from the important positions they hold. Secondly, they may be preparing to move down the Bihac-Krupa road which is threatened from either side by partisan groups with reinforcements for the Dalmatian coast where the Germans are in constant fear of an allied invasion.

Ceiling Prices On Radio Tubes

WASHINGTON, May 15.—(INS)—The Office of Price Administration established specific dollar and cent wholesale and retail ceiling prices today for new standard radio replacement tubes for civilian radios and phonographs.

Effective May 20, the specific prices reflect those prevailing in the industry during March, 1942. OPA said a shortage of tubes had resulted in widespread black market activities, with consumers being charged three or four times the proper price.

The new retail prices range from $1.10 to $1.30 for portables, 85c to $1.30 for table models and 75c to $1.10 for console and auto radios.

Today's action also specified that no charge may be made by a dealer or repairman for testing tubes when brought to his shop by a customer.

Johnston-White Leave For Russia

WASHINGTON, May 15.—(INS)—President Eric Johnston of the United States Chamber of Commerce leaves Washington by plane today for the Soviet to begin private talks on postwar Russo-American economic collaboration.

Johnston, who was invited to Russia by Premier Stalin, is accompanied by W. L. White, editor of the Emporia (Kans.) Gazette and son of the late famous publisher.

The Chamber of Commerce head is making the trip as a private citizen, but represents 600,000 American businessmen. Johnston will tour Russia's great industrial plants and discuss problems of postwar adjustments and mutual relationships in world trade.

THE WORLD AND THE MUD PUDDLES

they might also recall that they themselves did a bit of horse-swapping in midstream when they traded Chamberlain for Churchill. And they might also explain some of the insistence over there now to trade Mr. Churchill for Anthony Eden. They wouldn't understand our criticism of either of those moves, and any attempt on our part to intervene doubtless would be given a traditionally cool British reception.

The British view, if accepted by the American people, would mean that only Franklin D. Roosevelt ever could be a suitable executive for the United States. Even the most ardent New Dealer would not defend that view. And if our affairs have reached such a stage, then the sooner we make the change in the White House the safer we will be. An indispensable man is not only a danger; he is a serious liability to any concern, whether it be government or a private business. Eventually he will pass out of the picture, and then what?

The British need have no fear that the election of Mr. Dewey would alter our determination to clean up the war and devise a proper peace. Neither would they delude themselves with the feeling that the American war effort is an exclusive function of the Democratic Party.

The difference between the two countries and the difficulty which the British have in understanding us rests largely upon our disinclination to "muddle through." We prefer to get things done and we have no such dogma as the one so often attributed to the British—"we lose the battles but we win the wars." We've been winning quite a few battles, too. That makes the winning of the war so much easier.

Moreover, the British might also bear in mind the fact that any country, such as ours, that can fight so many battles so valiantly on so many far-flung fronts, easily can leap from one horse to another in the middle of a stream without losing headway. Particularly, since the horse we have been riding for eleven years has been floundering around in substantially the same place.

reading difficult, help him learn to recognize a few letters of the alphabet each evening.

Once your child can read some he may choose on his own accord to read aloud and, while living on the floor when you are busy, spell out each word he can't read, for you to pronounce. This is so much better than for you to have him sit or stand beside you and read. He works at his own speed and calls for help only when he feels the need of it. He manages himself.

My two bulletins, "Home Helps for Poor Readers," (Part I for grades up to five, and Part II for the upper grades and high school), may be had by writing me at 235 East 45th street, New York City, enclosing a self-addressed stamped envelope. Here are a few sentences from Part I about the poor reader:

Have his hearing and vision checked by a specialist. Be patient. Never let yourself grow angry at him over his reading. Draw familiar objects with the appropriate name of each printed under it. Have him play, do likewise.

Interest him in signs on the streets and stores. Have him dictate stories of his own for you to type or print and him to read. Comics which are really funny and not fearful are also good for teaching reading at home.

About the greatest possible urge to learn to read is the wish to read to a younger child, especially to a baby, brother or sister. Therefore, about the best way to help a poor reader is to induce him to read to a baby or very young child. Have him read only what he can read easily. You can find very easy, well-illustrated, interesting booklets at your local library, at your book store, even in a five and ten store. Also some children's magazines are excellent for the poor reader.

MUTTON
Leg of mutton, lamb chops or other cuts are very good sources of mutton.

Mutton is rich in minerals and vitamins. It provides about 100 calories per ounce.

There are so many ways of cooking it that a great variety is provided.

Mutton stew seems to be a great favorite. It is fine that we have so many different kinds of meat. We get tired of one kind all the time. A change occasionally helps some.

An adult needs two or three ounces of protein every day. That means that he should eat a protein food at every meal. Meat, eggs, fish, cheese, rolled oats and gelatin are good sources of protein.

Meat yields about 20 per cent protein, so the necessary amount for each day can be calculated.

Mother's Day
At Henry Home

Special Program Is Presented
By New Castle Eagles
On Sunday Afternoon

Weather that might have been "a day in June" was on tap for Mothers' Day, Sunday, May 14. Blue skies and a warming sun and never a hint of rain. As a result the churches were filled for the morning service and a profusion of flowers adorned the altars.

Several special services were presented in the afternoon. One of unusual merit was presented at the Margaret L. Henry Home for Children in the afternoon by the Fraternal Order of Eagles, Aerie No. 455. Gathered around the memorial to the late Margaret L. Henry, officers of the organization staged the program with the men and women's drill team in uniform aiding in it.

Judge Braham Speaks

The speaker at the service was Judge W. Walter Braham who paid tribute to the mothers of the world. The program was opened by J. D. Thompson, president of the Eagles, and after prayer by Rev. John M. Unger, little Sammy Secco, a guest in the home, welcomed the crowd with an original poem written by Mrs. Lida Green, matron.

Thomas Cunningham, chairman of the day was presented and called upon Louis Kruger who gave the history of Mothers' Day and the part the Eagles had in developing it. Each child of the home was called up to the memorial stone and laid a flower upon it in honor of the late Miss Henry.

Charles W. Read, president of the Home's board of directors expressed the appreciation of the board for the fine work done by the Eagles in connection with the Home.

Program Indoors

The crowd then went indoors where the Eagles had provided a program of entertainment with an orchestra. Each of the youngsters was given a present as was Mrs. Green.

Another function at the home Sunday was the inspection of the new hospital equipment. With their families the board members went through the renovated hospital, and what they saw is a tribute to the generosity of New Castle citizens. New blankets, both cotton and wool, 44 of each, sheets, pillow cases, towels, and numerous other articles, paint on the walls of the hospital, linoleum on the floor, all of these are the gifts of the Bundles from New Castle. Books and magazines for the youngsters were presented by the Women's Club of New Castle and the new manglers for the home were presented by the Elk's Junior Commandos.

It was a big day at the Margaret L. Henry Home. And all of it because the people of New Castle remember the little folks who are being reared in the Margaret L. Henry Home.

Congress Facing Interim Session

Failure To Clear Up Log-Jam May Result In Between Conventions

By WILLIAM THEIS
(U. S. Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, May 15.—House majority leader McCormack warned today that failure to clear up the legislative log-jam now facing congress would probably mean an interim session between the two national political conventions.

A scant five weeks away from the June 20 goal set for recessing for the Republican convention, congress has enacted into law only two of its 15 major appropriation bills. Funds carried in the bills must be provided before the new fiscal year opens on July 1.

Time Getting Short

At least three other major measures, among them extension of the price control act, also remain to be passed.

"I believe we can get everything done," McCormack said. "But if we should fail to complete our work on these bills which must be passed, it would probably mean we'd reconvene after the Republican convention to finish up."

The GOP convention opens June 26. Three weeks intervene between the close of the Republican meeting and the July 19 Democratic nominating sessions.

In addition to the 13 appropriation bills still to be sent to the White House, congress has pending the tax simplification bill, now in the senate after house approval, the price control extension bill awaiting vote in both houses, and the G-I bill of rights for veterans now being considered in the house. The latter has passed the senate but faces a fight on amendments which probably will send it to a conference committee.

New Guinea Native Man Of Few Words

WASHINGTON, May 15.—(INS)—The army has found a native communicative writer in New Guinea who is a man of few words.

Col. Charles C. Blanchard, just back from the southwest Pacific front, reports that native communicative, though seldom couched in dignified military phraseology, can be singularly expressive.

One native, an eye-witness of an American bombing and strafing attack on a Japanese encampment, was asked to report what happened. His reply:

"Plenty dead, plenty wounded plenty good."

No Rationing Of Vacation Travel

PITTSBURGH, May 15.—(INS)—Rationed vacation travel today isn't in sight, according to Roy B. White, president of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad.

White and postmaster general Frank C. Walker stopped off in Pittsburgh after receiving honorary degrees at the St. Francis college graduation at Loretto, Pa.

The genial executive who began his 44-year-old railroading career as a telegrapher, said:

"That doesn't mean that everyone should travel. People should not travel unless it's necessary. We should stay home so servicemen can ride."

In spite of a recent law rents continue to rise in Nicaragua.

Know Your Schools

THE PLATOON SCHOOL

The "work-study-play" or platoon school was originated and used by Superintendent William A. Wirt in speaking of his new type of school at Bluffton, Ind., in 1900. He used the former term to make clear the educational program and philosophy of the schools which he developed there. Superintendent Wirt has always spoken of his schools as "work-study-play schools", maintaining that this name best characterizes his schools, since the time of pupils is divided between these three activities—work and study and play.

In 1908 William A. Wirt became superintendent of schools at Gary, Ind., and there was added to Wirt's philosophy another feature—economy—and this blended many of the real basic principles of the platoon or work-study-play school as Wirt visualized them. Economy entered into Wirt's philosophy not as an end but as a means to an end, the end being "a better world for the child," which has always been his creed as an educator. His contention is that "if some other child could use my child's seat when my child does not need it, my child could have a better school seat to use when he does need it."

In other words, this plan of organization provides for the dividing of the school into two groups called platoons, and for such a schedule that while one platoon is mastering the fundamental subjects in home rooms, the other platoon is engaged with activity subjects in special rooms. Modifications of the platoon plan were adopted by the following cities: New Castle, Pa.; Kalamazoo, Mich.; Kansas City, Mo.; and Sewickley, Pa.

The work-study-play system of education was immediately endorsed by some of the outstanding educators of that day. Some of these educators were Dr. John Dewey of Columbia University, Supt. Frank Cody of Detroit, Dr. Angelo Patri of New York, Supt. Wm. McAndrew of Chicago, Supt. Wm. M. Davidson of Pittsburgh, and other too numerous to mention.

Quoting Dr. R. D. Case in his book, "The Platoon School in America," "The platoon school of today is the result of a process of evolution which has been going on for the past three decades. This plan of organization of elementary schools has been subjected, during that time, to the most exacting tests and the most severe criticisms known to leaders in the educational world. Its merely experimental period is now past, and the platoon plan is being accepted as one of the most progressive that has influenced public education."

Fundamental Principles
To justify the platoon organization and to meet the challenge of society, there seem to be a few fundamental principles, namely:

1. A proper system of education development must be based on the inherent traits of children.

Nature has endowed all children with a common group of tendencies that are basic to their physical, moral and intellectual development. Among these are curiosity, imagination, emotion, acquisitiveness, and desire for constructive activities involving tools and materials.

In addition to these basic traits, children possess certain sense powers that, by using the natural tendencies, interpret the child's environment to his growing intellect and also sharpen and magnify the powers themselves.

That system of education that takes this fundamental principle as a corner-stone must be both pedagogically and psychologically sound. This the platoon plan definitely attempts to do.

2. The emphasis on all educative procedure should be placed on the process, not on the product.

Children are not healthily developed by the study of fact information or the memorization of book knowledge alone. The widening of a child's environmental horizon, the stimulation of larger and better ideals of life and service, the development coming from having desirable experiences, and the knowledge gained from observing and handling natural objects—they are fundamental to a worth-while educational system. These are basic in a platoon program.

3. Schools should train for civic and social welfare.

If the chief purpose of our schools is to develop good social behavior and to train for worthy citizenship, it is necessary that opportunities be given to children to practice the duties and put to proper use the principles underlying our social obligations.

The platoon school, through its varying activities, its freedom from overhead domination, and the constant opportunities afforded for fostering self-control, pupil responsibility, and fine initiative furnishes definite and valuable training in social service.

4. The learning process should be a pleasurable one.

Schools should be organized to hold the interest and attendance of children. This does not mean that all drill work should be discarded or there should be no unpleasant tasks. It does mean that for the sake of some outstanding satisfaction coming from an enriched program and teaching power, pupils will willingly undergo the apparent drudgery of the moment for the sake of its achievement in furthering their pleasure and profit in some desired activity. This satisfaction and pleasure in school life the platoon school is peculiarly successful in furnishing.

Such in brief, are a few of the actuating principles that justify the platoon type of school organization. It is now necessary to present some of the definite values contributed by this system.

Some Benefits
From the time of its first inception and experiment in this country the purpose of the platoon program was to enrich the educational opportunities of children. This has been accomplished in three ways:

1. An enriched curriculum. Although many of the activities of the Platoon program have functioned in many of the non-platoon school in various cities of our country, their practice was not general, their operation depended on the ability and vision of the teacher, and their time allotment was subordinated to the exactions of the so-called fundamental subjects. The platoon program has been enriched by writing into a definite schedule such activities as nature study, library, and auditorium activities.

2. An enriched teaching activity. Through this second contribution of the platoon program we have a still greater value coming to the educational development of children. In the platoon school teachers are selected and appointed for the conduct of certain activities in terms of their native endowments and preparation. Hence a teacher freed from the burden of teaching all the subjects required for a certain group of pupils, for which work she has neither aptitude nor preparation, is able to center her efforts on one or two subjects which make their appeal because of her native ability and pleasure in them. Teaching and learning are vitalized.

3. The third enrichment contribution comes from the fact that each activity is carried on in a room selected and equipped in harmony with the spirit of the subject taught therein. Thus a music art, a nature, a library, a health room, etc., gives forth the message and inner meaning of the activity involved. This appeal to the subconscious mind of the child is, in our judgment, a most powerful influence for good in the teaching process, and in this contribution the platoon program is peculiarly rich.

4. An efficient program of health education. Good health is fundamental to the happiness and welfare of the home, the satisfaction in and accomplishment of school activities and in the training for social service and civic duties. In the platoon school the health program is essentially the backbone of the whole program.

5. A more efficient use of the school plant.

In every school building are found some rooms more desirable for teaching service than others. These better conditioned rooms in a platoon school are used for those activities in which pupils spend the greater portion of their time, and those more unfavorably conditioned are used for the activities requiring less eye-strain, less work with pencil and pen, and in which less time is spent by any group.

6. An economy of supplies and equipment.

This comes from the fact that supplies and equipment are centralized, guarded, and more effectively used. Thus instead of a supply of music art, nature material, etc., being given to each class unit in a given school, all music material is centralized in a music room under the care of a music teacher. In like manner the art, nature and health, library material, etc., is centralized. This requires but a fraction of the amount formerly used and is more effectively and economically administered.

7. An adequate provision and preparation in the academic subjects, a conservation of the school life and interests of children, a greatly reduced truancy, and a desirable training in personality and character formation.

From comparative studies made in many cities the above values have been invariably found to have been secured under the platoon type of school organization.

Make Plans For Enforcement Of Curfew Law Here

Council Authorizes Steps Needed To Provide For Proper Action On Law

When council convened in the city building today, Mayor John F. Haven referred council colleagues to the curfew ordinance which caused a discussion several days ago then explained that no provision had been made whereby the police department could properly enforce the law.

Police Chief Robert D. Hanna was directed by Mayor Haven to explain the police situation. Before the session was over colleagues granted Mayor Haven and Chief Hanna authority to make all arrangements for enforcing the curfew ordinance.

Council acknowledged that the ordinance calls for a room in which persons who violate the law can be detained and also for proper supervision.

The mayor indicated that now that council had authorized the expenditure of money for enforcing the law a proper place would be procured and a woman attendant employed.

Council explained that when the law was passed by a former administration the body thought it was understood that the mayor would have the right to take over the situation.

Mayor Haven explained that he was not in office and knew nothing of such an arrangement. When he developed the curfew situation today council gave him unqualified support.

This means that after the proper place and persons have been procured all persons under 18 must be off the public streets by 11 p. m.

Heinz Speaker At Allegheny College

MEADVILLE, Pa., May 15.—(INS)—Henry J. Heinz, president of the H. J. Heinz company of Pittsburgh, today warned that there must be a renewal of individual responsibility in government.

Heinz told the graduating class of Allegheny college that the average intelligent citizen has left the functioning of our democratic system too much to politicians.

"This has resulted in a steadily increasing assumption of power and control by federal officials," he stated, "growth of bureaucracy and greater dependence of the individual on government for the solution of problems."

"Now we must determine how to limit encroachment upon and violations of our civil and economic liberties. Our freedom in the future will be a direct result of education, purposeful thinking and hard work."

Moose Honor Mothers Sunday

Annual Mother's Day Program Is Presented In Moose Temple

New Castle Lodge No. 51, Loyal Order of Moose, had its annual Mother's Day observance with a program in the Moose Temple on South Mercer street, Sunday afternoon. Lloyd McKinnon was chairman of arrangements.

Presley N. Jones served as master of ceremonies, and the principal speaker was Sgt. Paul M. Miller, a patient at Deshon hospital, tall gunner on a Liberator bomber, who saw action in the England and North African theaters. He took part in the raid on Rome, and also the famous first raid on the Ploesti oil field in Romania, in August 1943. He lost his hearing as a result of injuries in the Ploesti raid, and is undergoing treatment at Deshon hospital. He hopes to stay in service as an instructor.

Sgt. Miller recounted many incidents in connection with his engagements, and tied them in with the spirit of motherhood and loved ones, which spurred the men on in battle.

William P. Williams sang two beautiful solo numbers, accompanied by Ernest Branstetter. Sally and Donna Eckley gave a duet number, accompanied by Steve Griffith and the Moose orchestra. George Gettings, governor of New Castle lodge gave some appropriate remarks, and Steve Griffith sang a number, accompanied by Dave Jones and Edward Longacre.

ned cross-channel operations. A variety of targets appeared to be involved in the missions as the outgoing formations took many different courses.

The attacking formation of Ports and Liberators was estimated at about 250 bombers with an escort of a like number of fighters.

The presence of allied craft over the continent in force, carrying into the 31st consecutive day an all-out air offensive temporarily checked through a 20-hour period Saturday and Sunday by adverse weather, caused the Cologne, Frankfurt and Bremen radios in Germany to remain silent.

The first wave of Yank bombers flew south over the southeast coast of England shortly after 8 a. m.

Observers at Folkestone said waves of bombers headed in the direction of the Pas De Calais area of the French coast in the morning over the Dover straits which again were brilliant with sunlight. The first formations were medium bombers, including American Liberators, which headed for the Le Touquet area. Soon another formation of bombers and fighters followed.

A quarters of an hour later a large force returned from over the northern portion of the straits.

German Planes Over Britain

Formation of German planes which appeared over England spread out over widely separated points along the south and southwest coast. Apparently they engaged mainly in reconnaissance, dropping relatively few bombs.

British defense units brought down 15 Nazi planes, a proportionately large number for the size of the enemy force employed.

The Nazi-operated Paris radio network, including the transmitters at Bordeaux, Rennes and Lille, left the air abruptly at about 8 o'clock when the raiders set out for their targets.

Radio Budapest said that some allied planes had carried out nuisance raids on Hungarian communities, indicating that Mediterranean air force night bombers were in operation.

Nazi night raiders were active in the cross-channel warfare, attacking areas on the English south coast. Damages and casualties were reported. The enemy dropped mainly incendiaries around southwest England, although high explosives were showered near one town.

The English south coast was raided twice last night and early this morning. One town sent up one of the most terrific anti-aircraft barrages of the war.

The first medical school in America was established in Philadelphia in 1761.

ASSESSMENT POLICY
After some weeks of study and work, Chief Assessor John W. Pattison has worked out forms for the assessment of properties in the county which seems to have considerable merit. At present the forms are merely tentative and may be adjusted where discrepancies are found.

Through the use of the forms Mr. Pattison hopes to bring about an equalization of assessments in the county. There are two forms, one for urban property and one for rural property.

Under the plan set down for city property, houses would be divided into classes A, B, C and D. Class A would include the better homes with modern facilities. Class B would include a large portion of homes in the city, including the substantial six-room type. Class C and D are made up of the first floor, a two-story city home it is first necessary to classify it. Then a valuation is placed on each room. For example, a class A home would be assessed at $1,000 to $1,400 per room. Class B, $900 to $1,000; class C, $700 to $900, and class D, $500 and $600.

From this assessment value is taken depreciation for the years served the house has given. As an example: you have a six-room frame home with a slate roof, hardwood floors on the first floor, a bathroom and a concrete cellar. This would fit into class B and the gross assessment is $5,400.

Suppose the house was built in 1920. For the first 10 years of the house's life take one per cent per year, or a total of 10 per cent. For the balance of the years up to 25, take two per cent per year, or a total in this case of 14 years, or 28 per cent. The total depreciation is 38 per cent, or $2,052. Subtract from $5,400 and your assessment on the house alone is $3,348. To this add the assessment for the lot, say $700, and your total assessment value is $4,048.

Mr. Pattison believes that if all property is assessed equally, the gross figure is not important. The county has to raise so much money for expenses each year, and this should come from the taxpayers up on an equal basis.

SECRET OF D-DAY BEING WELL KEPT IN ALLIED RANKS

People living in coastal districts of Britain, all of them the sealed-off invasion possible jumping-off places, have "lost their tongues."

They see troops, convoys, supplies and weapons by the mile, and hear the rumbling explosions "over there." They are full of curiosity, and exchange glances. But they also know that Hitler agents are leaving no stone unturned to ferret out any tiny scrap of information. They look at the posters on the walls cautioning silence and discretion, and keep their thoughts to themselves.

The busiest and most valuable source of information on the nature and detail of the second front has been, as far as occupied Europe and Britain is concerned, the wild Nazi. The pattern spun by Berlin has had little variation from its early inception in pre-war years.

As the Nazis have it in their crystal ball, the second front begins through terrific Allied air bombings of the fortified zones chosen for the initial landings. Then, on 'D'-Day—in the dark hours preceding dawn, the naval might of Britain and America will combine in tossing a armada of shells into the selected beachheads, followed by the first landing units of no more than commando size to establish thumb-nail footholds for the real assault waves to come.

But the Nazis then hasten to explain their anti-invasion chief, Fieldmarshal Erwin Rommel and Wehrmacht commander in the west, Fieldmarshal Von Rundstedt, are waiting "with icy calm" for just that day or night.

They will then give the signal for German guns to go off, and the Allied invasion fleet will rock under the blast of radio-controlled bombs, under the attack of shoals of the new 30-foot baby u-boats, and amidst deadly minefields blowing everywhere.

Battle For Atlantic Wall
After the battle of the beach-heads comes the battle for the Atlantic wall. They tell how Eisenhower will throw scores and scores of Allied divisions into the beach-heads as the initial phases pass into the second phase, where sheer overweight in weapons, equipment and firing power will be relied on by the Allies to crush the Atlantic wall.

In the German crystal ball, the 45,000 alleged forts of the Atlantic wall will take up the main shock of the Allied striking power.

All this, as the Nazis depict it, will lead into the third and most important phase. By then the stage will have been set for the grim battle on open ground. In reality, however, that open showdown behind the Atlantic wall will be the great Wehrmacht counter-offensive.

This climactic counter-offensive, the Germans say, will be the drive to throw the Allies ingloriously back into the sea.

It will catch the Allied armies at their weakest moment, when Rommel and Rundstedt will unfurl the whole striking power of the Wehrmacht.

They have it all figured out, all right, and their crystal ball has ever so much more to offer. But their invasion blueprint, although depicted on the cut-and-dried pattern, leaves much to be desired. A new shade might be added in the fact that German calculations have been badly upset before.

To the Allied leaders, the Hitler European fortress is an open book, and the Atlantic wall holds no secret. It holds the key to victory.

German Bomber Attack Repulsed In Italian Area

NAPLES, May 15.—(INS)—Two waves of fighter-bombers were sent into action by the Germans against the Allies in the Cassino battle area but the enemy craft were intercepted before they could bomb Allied troops, headquarters announced today.

Five Messerschmitt 109's and three Focke-Wulf 190's were destroyed in combat.

A force of 20 or more German craft were intercepted near Cassino when the first attempt was made and were driven off before they could attack. Another formation of eight was forced to jettison its bombs at Arce, northwest of Cassino.

SCRAP LUMBER FOUND ABLAZE
City firemen were called to the rear of the Max Ludwig Company, West Washington street, at 6:15 p. m. Sunday where a pile of old scrap lumber was found ablaze. Fire Chief James E. Thomas reports. Virtually no loss resulted, firemen extinguishing the blaze.

At 4:45 p. m., Saturday, firemen were called and told that lightning had struck a home at 413 North Cedar street, during the electric storm. Box 72 was sounded, and on arrival firemen found that lightning had struck a lead-in wire on the power line in the alley between North Cedar and North Liberty street. No action was required.

New Deadlock In Ward-Union Fight

CHICAGO, May 15.—(INS)—A new deadlock between Montgomery Ward & Co. and its CIO union employees was foreseen today with the beginning of contract negotiations, which both sides said probably would start this week.

Sevell L. Avery, Montgomery Ward board chairman, has resisted every request of the union and every directive of the War Labor board to include in a contract the maintenance of membership clause.

Should the negotiations fail and the company defy a WLB order to include maintenance of membership clause as it did previously, the situation would be right back where it was when Federal troops seized the plant for the government April 26 on President Roosevelt's executive order.

ATTACKS IN ITALY START OF OFFENSIVE

might be defeated. The Italian attack is without doubt the first blow of the coming all-embracing assaults against Axis Europe.

For months plans have been made carefully, the necessary troops and supplies have been amassed at the proper locations, and then all of the many plans coordinated into the exact pattern of all the offensives which undoubtedly will be the most extensive and most bloody ever known to man.

More Blows Coming
Gen. Sir Harold Alexander, commander of the allied troops in Italy, made that definitely clear in his order of the day to his soldiers. He said in effect, that the allied fifth and British eighth armies have been honored by being designated to strike the first blow of many to be directed against our Axis enemies from the east, from the north and from the south, which will result in the final annihilation of Hitler and his Axis ideology.

In the past, there has been considerable criticism about the slowness of the Italian campaign. Even our leaders have acknowledged that it did not go according to schedule. But in spite of that still no one knows whether the time table of fighting on the Italian peninsula was held to that desired by the supreme command.

Great Objective Obtained
The greatest objectives possible to the Italian assault have been accomplished—the opening of the Mediterranean sea to allied ships and the establishment of great airplane bases at Foggia. There could be a thousand and one other reasons why that campaign was held

Walters Hurls One-Hit Game At Cincinnati

Connie Ryan Spoils Hall Of Fame Bid With Scratch Single In 8th

PIRATES DEFEAT GIANTS TWICE

By JOHN CASHMAN
(International News Service Sports Writer)
NEW YORK, May 15.—Bucky Walters, Cincinnati Reds flinger, today belongs to the sad legion of moundmen who, at one time or other, have had one foot in the no-hit hall of fame only to have the other one kicked out from under them by a heart-breaking, last-minute twist of circumstance.

Bucky came dramatically close to achieving a no-hit game against the Boston Braves yesterday. Close To Fame

The baseball melodrama occurred in the eighth inning of the first game, in which Bucky pitched the Reds to a 4 to 0 triumph. The Braves had been popping up and grounding out for seven innings, when Connie Ryan came to the plate. Connie caught an inside fast ball on the handle of his bat. The bludgeon split, but the ball arched over the head of First Baseman Chick Akin.

Ira Hutchinson then went on to blank the Reds, 6 to 0, on eight hits. Tommy De La Cruz yielded 12 hits in being charged with the loss.

The New York Giants bounced into seventh place with a pair of losses to the Pittsburgh Pirates, 1 to 0 in ten innings and 8 to 2.

The Philadelphia Phillies were kept in second place as they lost both ends of a double-header to the St. Louis Cardinals, 6 to 3 and 1 to 0.

The Brooklyn Dodgers split a twin bill with the Chicago Cubs, winning the first game, 4 to 2, and losing the second after blowing a 7 to 1 lead. Haney took the nightcap triumph when the Cubs collected seven runs in the last two innings to win 8 to 7.

The New York Yankees strengthened their American league lead by trouncing the Cleveland Indians twice, 4 to 3 in 13 innings and 8 to 4.

The Philadelphia Athletics belted the St. Louis Browns in both ends of a twin bill, 4 to 3 in 11 innings and 2 to 0.

The Washington Senators and Chicago White Sox split a twin bill, the Senators winning the first contest, 4 to 0, and the White Sox the nightcap, 6 to 4 on a four-run assault in the ninth inning.

The Boston Red Sox were shaved down into the cellar by the Detroit Tigers, who won both games of a twin bill, 6 to 1 and 9 to 0.

Mahoning and George Washington track teams are engaging in a dual meet this afternoon. The starting time is 4 o'clock.

MAY STOCK TROUT IN LITTLE BEAVER

BEAVER FALLS, May 15.—There is a possibility that an additional trout stream will be acquired in Beaver County and in Lawrence County. The stream in question is the Little Beaver River, which winds its way through both counties.

At the last meeting of the Beaver County Sportsmen's League the delegates from the Beaver Falls Sportsmen's Club, broached the subject to Joseph Critchfield, member of the Board of Fish Commissioners of Pennsylvania, according to Frank Jurczak's story in the Beaver Falls News-Tribune.

The plan outlined by the delegates, would retain the classification of the stream as bass water and the trout stocking would be done above the bridge at Darlington. Mr. Critchfield's reaction to this proposal was favorable.

Rochester Gets Big Ten Coach

LAFAYETTE, Ind., May 15.—(INS)—The University of Rochester reached into the Big Ten conference today to take one of its outstanding football coaches, Elmer Burnham, head coach for Purdue University, which was unbeaten and untied last season.

He will take the place of Dudley De Groot who has quit Rochester to become coach for the Washington Redskins professional football team. Burnham, who will quit the Purdue campus July 1 for his new post, said he was leaving with regret but that he was receiving a long term contract with Rochester as head football coach and associate professor of physical education which he did not feel he could turn down.

Mutuel Handling Sets New Record

CHICAGO, May 15.—(INS)—Sportsman's Park Chicago's little half-mile race track went into 14th and final day of its spring meeting today with an all-time record Mutuel handle of $7,829,770 for the 13 days.

This compared with $5,040,779 for the first 13 days of last spring's meeting and another half million or more dollars was expected to go through the Mutuels this afternoon.

The dizzy betting pace at the miniature course was taken as a forecast of what might be expected at the regular sized tracks, the first of which opens tomorrow with the Lincoln Fields meeting at Hawthorne.

The accident occurred when lightning struck a two-gun army anti-aircraft emplacement setting off a series of explosions of shells stored there. No injuries were reported and fires started by the explosions were extinguished quickly.

WPIAL Meet Is Next On Card

Coach William "Bill" Klee will have his New Castle high track and field stars out every afternoon this week (weather permitting) in preparation for the grueling test this coming Saturday in the annual WPIAL meet at the Conneville High stadium.

It is no secret that New Castle is going to make a spirited bid for the championship with only a handful of experienced stars participating.

Klee is banking on Bill Walls, Campbell and Garberry to get New Castle at least two places in the broad jump. Greene is expected to take the distance race for New Castle or give somebody a tussle and Panella is being groomed for points in the dashes.

Pensive Takes Preakness Race

Kentucky Derby Winner Adds Preakness, Now Wants Belmont Victory

By LAWTON CARVER
(International News Service Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, May 15.—There is no doubt whatever in the mind of at least one man as to whether Pensive will win the triple crown of racing composed of the Kentucky Derby, the Preakness and the Belmont.

He should win the Belmont by 20 lengths, Eddie Arcaro said today.

This is offered as the opinion of an articulate, outspoken little gent who generally is regarded as the best jockey of these times, one who admits that he has changed his notions and become a believer in the Calumet colt since last winter when he rode him and wouldn't have given a dime for his chances in the big stakes.

Belmont Next

Since then, Edward Star Up, Arcaro has finished third to Pensive in the Kentucky Derby and again in the Preakness at Pimlico last Saturday. He thinks the Belmont at a mile and a half will be even more to Pensive's liking than the shorter Derby and Preakness and he intimated that it is quite all right with him that he won't have to ride against Pensive in the Belmont. Star Up is ineligible.

"No, I wouldn't say Pensive is a great horse, but he certainly is the best by far of a mediocre lot," Arcaro said.

When Pensive took that Preakness by three-parts of a length over Platter and two more lengths over Star Up, he convinced them all that even if his greatness is open to doubt he is en route to honors as horse of the year as well as the triple crown.

Home Sweet Home For Flight Groups

Three Aircraft Carrier
Flight Groups In Pacific
Zone Ordered Home

By JOHN HENRY
(U. S. Staff Correspondent)

PEARL HARBOR, May 15.—Three aircraft carrier flight groups which have been shot down 186 Japanese planes, sank 113,000 tons of shipping and generally left a trail of flaming blood destruction throughout the Pacific were told today that they are going home on leave.

A trio of group commanders, Lieut. Comdr. Edgar E. Stebbins, Dallas, Texas; Jones G. Slaney, Chicago, and Henry Miller, Fairbanks, Alaska, appeared with a number of their leading airmen to describe the dramatic series of events stretching from the attacks on Wake and Marcus to the capture of the Gilberts and Marshalls and the downfall of Rabaul.

Proud of Fliers
Stebbins, chief of air group five, was proud that his fliers were able to claim a record of 2,535 sorties since September 1. Lieut. Comdr. Robert C. Jones, leader of group five's fighter squadron, explained how his Helldivers knocked down 94 Jap planes in contrast to only one aerial combat loss for his fliers.

"The Japs' tactics and determination have fallen off," he said. "They are not very anxious to mix it up and fight for position to make runs."

Stebbins cut in with: "But the Japs are not through by any means, and are still able to put on some good attacks." Lieut. John F. Glavin, Champaign, Ill., one of group five's aces with eight planes to his credit, had this to say on the Jap pilot's fighting ability:

"This is no individual war with us. It's teamwork and the way we do it is to gang up and shoot hell out of them. I noticed the Japs tried to copy our tactics at Palau, using four plane fighter teams, but it was swell for us because we shot into them like a coxy of birds."

Praise Flight Crew
Lieut. Comdr. Daniel Harrington, Springfield, Mass., reported that he hasn't lost a pilot or radioman from his dive-bomber squadron in seven months and two other pilots, Lieut. J. G. Leo Pierson, Cheney, Wash., and Chester Spray, Lawrence, Kan., praised the fighters for covering the slower bombers.

The Rabaul raid of November 5, where the ack-ack was the heaviest we've seen and the Japs had 75 fighters to our 19, was the toughest assignment yet for group 23 which was based aboard a converted cruiser-carrier of the independence type class, Miller pointed out.

The 23rd group, with only seven planes under the command of Lieut. Comdr. Martin T. Hatcher, Bedford, Va., went in to hit two light cruisers and a destroyer, with the loss of two of their own planes.

Among the heroes in Slaney's outfit is Lieut. Frederick C. Tohill, of Kansas City, Mo., who led five torpedo raids—more than any other squadron in the war—and who led the TBF's into Kwajalein without fighter escort and Lieut. Richard Z. Hughes, fighter pilot who split up an entire Jap formation at Truk and strafed enemy guns on Nauru, saving a destroyer which was under fire.

Men Are Happy
The gallant fliers, awaiting transportation back home to their wives and sweethearts, seemed anxious to tell tales of war—how the enemy is being outstripped by our planes. They are quick, also, to give credit to others.

All of them speak out as though the chance to go home has lifted a burden from their minds.

As Slaney puts it: "The boys are mighty happy to be going back to God's country."

Local Girl Will Be Given Wilson Degree
CHAMBERSBURG, Pa., May 15.—Miss Nancy McKee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. McKee, Jr., 414 North Mercer street, New Castle, Pa., is among the 70 young women who will be candidates for bachelors degrees at the 74th annual Wilson College commencement, May 29.

Judge Florence E. Allen, famed woman jurist, will deliver the commencement address, and Dr. Claude Allen McKay, pastor of the First Congregational church, Binghamton, N. Y., the baccalaureate sermon. Degrees will be conferred by President Paul Strain Havens.

Miss McKee is treasurer of the senior class and is a member of the stage-set forum of the Kittichiny Players, campus dramatic club. She was chairman of the refreshment committee for the recent May Day fete. English is Miss McKee's field of academic concentration and Spanish is her allied subject.

MAY DAY PROGRAM AT THIEL COLLEGE
GREENVILLE, Pa., May 15.—Thiel college will present its annual May Day festival next Saturday. Miss Mary Ann Zaludny of Ford City will be crowned queen by James Fry of Jamestown, president of the senior class. Miss Zaludny is president of the Y. W. C. A., vice president of the senior class and secretary of Modern Language club and Tri Beta.

PHI KAPPA PHI WAS FIRST
First national honorary scholarship fraternity to establish a chapter at the Pennsylvania State college was Phi Kappa Phi. This was in 1900.

Restaurant Price Survey Is Being Extended In Area

PITTSBURGH, May 15.—Six hundred forty-eight out of 532 Pittsburgh district restaurants were found to be selling sandwiches, dessert and coffee over ceiling prices in a recent check, Alvah J. Williams, district OPA director, revealed.

In a more complete survey of meal prices in 585 restaurants in industrial and mining centers, 125 were reported in violation.

The investigations were conducted by price panels of the 47 local war price and rationing boards. All violators have appeared before the local price panels and, in all but 25 cases, have agreed to roll back all prices to those required under OPA regulations, namely those in effect from April 4 to April 10, 1943. These prices were required to be filed with local war price and rationing boards at that time and act as a guide to the price panel. Failure to have made such a filing is a violation. The 25 cases where price panels were unable to obtain compliance have been referred to the district OPA enforcement division.

The more complete survey on meal prices is being extended to all restaurants in the district.

Medical Problems Will Be Discussed At Deshon Session

Medical problems growing out of the war will be discussed at a one-day wartime graduate medical meeting at Deshon General hospital, Butler, May 25.

Psychiatric therapy, the discharged psychiatric soldier and rehabilitation of the hard of hearing will be among the topics.

The meeting is under the auspices of the American Medical association, American College of Physicians and American College of Surgeons. Dr. Leo H. Crip, representing a committee authorized by the surgeon general's office, arranged the gathering. Speakers include Lt. Col. Leslie E. Bovik, Lt. Col. William S. Love, Jr., Maj. Arthur M. Smith, Jr., Lt. Col. Marion R. Mobley, all of Deshon hospital; Dr. George J. Wright, Dr. George W. Grier, Dr. J. H. McCready and Dr. Kenneth M. Day, of the University of Pittsburgh School of Medicine; and Dr. J. Huber Wagner, chief surgeon for the Pittsburgh district, Carnegie-Illinois Steel corporation.

State Seeks Part Of Snuff Fortune

HARRISBURG, May 15.—(INS)—Court action to enable the commonwealth to claim 80 per cent of the $30,000,000 snuff fortune comprising the estate of the late Mrs. Henrietta S. Garrett, of Philadelphia, was planned today by Attorney General James H. Duff.

He said the action would be initiated under two acts approved by the 1943 legislature authorizing the commonwealth to levy an 80 per cent property tax on estates not disposed of by wills and unexpired after new claims seven years after the seven years. The laws also prohibit testator's death.

Mrs. Garrett, who died without heirs in 1930, willed only $62,500 and failed to mention the balance of the estate. An estimated 26,000 persons from the United States and 29 foreign countries have entered claims against the fortune.
